FINGER LAKES NATIONAL FOREST

FLNF is New York's only public, federally managed national forest.

6 miles west of Breezy Meadows Farm

Wooded glens and open pastures comprise the majority of the landscape in the Finger Lakes National Forest where the wooded areas are similar in character to state forests, managed by the Department of Environmental Conservation.

However, the pastures are what make these trails distinct from those in other forests. As is the case on many federally owned lands, grazing is permitted. Hikers will find that they share the pastures with cattle during the months of May to October, and must use a series of locking cattle gates when venturing in and out of the fields. Aside from the oddity of bovine accompaniment, the pastures offer excellent vistas that are especially beautiful in the fall when the hills across Seneca Lake are emblazoned with autumn colors.
